A Little While and a Long While

In His teaching given at the Last Supper, Jesus informs the Apostles that “A little while and you will no longer see me, and again a little while later and you will see me” (Jn 16:16). This distresses them because they do not understand. Jesus had told them three times about being handed over and killed. To the minds of the Apostles, however, it is as if Jesus is going on a vacation without them. Although they think they understand, they really don’t. The first little while He spoke of began a few hours later when He was arrested, but it would be the next day when this first ‘little while’ truly becomes final on the cross. At Jesus’ arrest, the Apostles all fled, but John and Peter turned back to follow along at a distance. The others, as Jesus predicted, each fled their own homes, scattered. No doubt, the news of Jesus’ death had them cower all the more.

Ten of them, however, are gathered by Easter morning in the upper room. They came together in grief. Perhaps they shared their favorite ‘Jesus stories.’ You remember when He said this to the Pharisee? Or when He raised Lazarus from the dead? We do much the same when we grieve the loss of a loved one. And no doubt, the question of ‘Now What’ loomed before them all. They were not expecting that second ‘little while’ Jesus spoke of at the Last Supper, the ‘little while’ where they would see Him again. The finality of death seems to have erased their expectation of the second ‘little while’ Jesus spoke of.

However, when Jesus departs from these same men in the Ascension, they know more clearly that there is no ‘little while’ for His return: He did not speak of a third ‘little while.’ They understand that He will not return again until the end of time. So, are they grieving alone or together? Are they wondering ‘Now What?’ Not at all. We are told that they “devoted themselves with one accord to prayer, together with some women, and Mary the mother of Jesus” (Acts 1:14).

So what is different between losing Jesus for a little while and losing Him until the end of time? Why the vastly different response? Was it the teaching of Jesus during those 40 days that made the difference before His Ascension? If so, then we have to ask how a few hours of instruction over a mere forty days was more effective than three full years of walking and talking with Jesus.

The obvious answer is the Resurrection itself. The Resurrection changed everything. But what did the Resurrection change? Did it merely increase the Apostles’ faith? Of course it did, but there is more than just faith at work in the Apostles. They were able to endure the loss of Jesus – the visible, physical loss of Jesus – at the Ascension because of the virtue of hope.

In his letter to the Romans, St Paul teaches “For in hope we were saved. Now hope that sees for itself is not hope. For who hopes for what one sees? But if we hope for what we do not see, we wait with endurance” (Rom 8:24-25). Since the Resurrection fostered hope, the Apostles no longer needed to see Jesus in the flesh and they could endure His visible absence for much more than a ‘little while.’

The same should apply for us. It is hope that makes it possible for us to endure whatever life in this world can throw at us. We really do ourselves a disservice – perhaps rising to the level of sin – if we place our hopes in anyone other than Jesus. If so-and-so gets elected, our problems will be solved. Our next pope, bishop, or pastor will solve our problems. We likewise do ourselves a disservice if we try to establish our own timelines. Jesus will return on such and such a date. I will be able to retire by age 50. A man in a gulag might even tell himself that he will be free by Christmas.

All that this does – placing our hope in something other than Jesus – is foster false hope. False hope almost always disappoints. False hope provides a very limited power to endure, perhaps not even for a ‘little while.’ False hope almost always limits us and confines our desires to this world.

So how do we endure whatever happens or does not happen? The Apostles’ hope-filled response to the Ascension gives us the answer: we ought to be ‘devoting ourselves with one accord to prayer with Mary the mother of Jesus.’ And probably not just for nine days either. Imagine how things might change if we devoted ourselves to prayer in one heart and one mind, trusting Jesus alone, continuing to do so even if it takes nine days, nine weeks, nine months, nine years, or nine decades.
